Man and Society: The Sociology of Human Relations (texts from before 1950)

Introduction

The purpose of this collection is to introduce some of the texts that laid the groundwork for the study of the sociology of human relations and social interaction – particularly as it became a distinct branch of social science research during the 20th Century.

It attempts to delineate certain fundamental facts about man, society, and the world, and the relations of each to the other.

Topics covered include:

- § Development of Human Character
- § Influence of Environment
- § Essentials of Well Being
- § Class War
- § Frameworks of Society
- § Leisure & Freedom
- § Religion in the Modern World
- § Sense of Community
- § Social Integration
- § Group Experience
- § Caste, Class and Race
- § Culture
- § Industrial Civilization
